

Interpersonal Intelligence

People smart: introspective thinkers, aware of their own motives, and heightened metacognitive abilities people who have a high interpersonal intelligence tend to be extroverts, characterized by their sensitivity to others' moods, feelings, temperaments and motivations, and their ability to cooperate in order to work as part of a group. They communicate effectively and empathize easily with others, and may be either leaders or followers. They typically learn best by working with others and often enjoy discussion and debate.

Tips for the way you learn:

- Give and receive feedback.
- Talk out problems.
- Work on large-group projects so you can use your social abilities to divide up tasks and understand all aspects of the project.
- Be a part of active learning through mentoring, tutoring, or an apprenticeship. This activity will reinforce your own knowledge or abilities.

Possible opportunities

Self-aware/self motivated, sales, politicians, managers, teachers, psychologists, and social workers

Careers that require insight and the ability to read what someone else is thinking or feeling

You Are an Interpersonal Learner

Your mantra: I understand what you mean.

Interpersonal learners thrive on social interaction. Friends often ask you for advice because you are understanding and in tune with the people around you and their motives, emotions, perspectives, and moods.

Your ability to manage relationships helps you understand situations and take a leadership role when necessary. You enjoy teaching and sharing your thoughts.

"I came. I saw. I conquered."

Julius Caesar

